Twelve Men From Each of the Three Interests to Formulate a Working Scheme.

PRESIDENT GOMPERS SPEAKS.

Declares His Belief in Organizations of Both Capital and Labor—Frank Sargent Replies to Schwab's Criticisms.

New York, Dec. 17.—The conference between the leaders of labor and capital closed to-day with a divergent to give the plan to harmonize their divergent interests a practical test.

It was unanimously agreed that the working details of the scheme shall be perfected by an Executive Committee of thirty-six, to be chosen in equal numbers from the ranks of organized labor, the great industrial and financial leaders, and the public not identified with either of the two interests.

In the afternoon Chairman Oscar P. Strauss and Secretary Ralph M. Easley, with Archbishop Ireland, Senator Hanna, Samuel Gompers, President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers, Frank P. Sargent of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and others who had taken part in the conference, met to select the members of the Executive Committee. After several hours of consultation, the following names were announced:

EMPLOYERS OF LABOR.
To represent the employers of capital—United States Senator Mark A. Hanna, James A. Chambers, president American Glass Company, Pittsburgh; William D. Hoar, president National Association of Store Manufacturers, S. H. Callaway, president American Locomotive Works, Lehigh, N. H.; Charles M. Schwab, president United States Steel Corporation; H. H. Woodland, president Metropolitan Trust Company, New York; Charles A. Moore, president of the Machine Manufacturing Company; John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; E. D. Ripley, president American Federation of Labor; Frank P. Sargent, grand master Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; Theodore J. Gaffey, president Amalgamated Association Iron, Steel and Tin Workers; James Duncan, secretary Granite Cutters' Union; Daniel J. Keefe, president International Association of Longshoremen; James O'Connell, president International Association of Machinists; Martin Fox, president Iron Molders' National Union; James E. Lynch, president International Typographical Union; Edward E. Clark, grand master Brotherhood of Railway Conductors; Henry White, secretary General Workers of America; Walter MacArthur, editor Coast Seamen's Journal, San Francisco.

ORGANIZED LABOR.
To represent organized labor—Samuel Gompers, president American Federation of Labor; Frank P. Sargent, grand master Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; Theodore J. Gaffey, president Amalgamated Association Iron, Steel and Tin Workers; James Duncan, secretary Granite Cutters' Union; Daniel J. Keefe, president International Association of Longshoremen; James O'Connell, president International Association of Machinists; Martin Fox, president Iron Molders' National Union; James E. Lynch, president International Typographical Union; Edward E. Clark, grand master Brotherhood of Railway Conductors; Henry White, secretary General Workers of America; Walter MacArthur, editor Coast Seamen's Journal, San Francisco.

THE PUBLIC.
To represent the public—Former President Grover Cleveland, Archbishop Ireland, Bishop Henry C. Potter, Charles Francis Adams, Boston; Cornelius N. Bliss, ex-Secretary of the Interior, Charles W. Smith, Treasurer of the University; Franklin MacVegh, Chicago; ex-Congressman of the Currency James H. Beale, John F. McKee, a lawyer of this city; John C. Millard of Buffalo, Charles A. Bonaparte, Baltimore.

Chairman of the Conference Oscar P. Strauss and Secretary Ralph M. Easley are ex-officio members of the committee.

A subcommittee of three, to consider a plan, scope and plan of the conference, will meet to-morrow for organization, the election of officers and the drafting of a plan upon which to work.

FOR COOPERATION.
The principal officers of the American Federation of Labor attended the closing session of the conference and gave the project their commendation. Samuel Gompers, the president of the association, disavowed antagonism on the part of labor toward aggregations of capital, and said he welcomed them to become the guest of the nation while here.

An appropriation for his Majesty's suitable entertainment is provided, but the sum is left blank for the present.

WAS A WELL-KNOWN JESUIT.

Father Ward Died at the Institution in Florissant.

The Reverend Father Ward, a well-known educator, died at the Jesuit institution at Florissant yesterday morning.

For several years Father Ward was connected with the Jesuit College in St. Louis and was known throughout the country as a great student and an authority on theological subjects. He had been ill some time, but his friends and others at the Florissant institution did not expect his illness to end in death.

NO FEARS FOR THE FUTURE.

Mr. Gompers expressed objection to the plan of holding labor unions responsible for damages in actions arising from their relationship with their employers, and expressed the opinion that they have suffered from the effect of industrial war, but that they are not to be deterred by such cases. Concluding, Mr. Gompers said: "Labor need have no fear for the future. Absolute assurance for it lies in the justice of its cause, the humane principles upon which it works, and in the grit and character which make up the American people."

John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers' Association, strongly advocated peace. He should be honest with one another. I have never seen a strike that could not be ended if the two interests met and talked in advance. If the great plan of peace is carried out, it will do more good than any other movement in our country. As one who knows the effect of industrial war, no one will welcome more than I industrial peace. I have always been for peace, only insisting that the peace be honorable peace."

FOR CHARITY AND JUSTICE.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND PLEADS.
Bishop Tillet of London, one of the English representatives at the meeting of the American Federation of Labor, and James Dunne, first vice president of the American Federation of Labor, also spoke. Archbishop Ireland said in part:

"May the winds carry the news over the ocean and around the world that such a meeting as this has taken place in the great city of New York. The hope of the Christian Church is that the great principles of brotherhood, charity and justice, announced by the Holy One of Palestine, shall be the basis of all human relations, and that they are brothers. Let charity and justice be the basis of all human relations, and justice more than charity, be the basis of all human relations. Let us always be for peace, only insisting that the peace be honorable peace."

HOLIDAY ATTRACTIONS IN BUSINESS DISTRICT.

Of the Christmas novelties sold by street merchants this season the man at Washington and Broadway seems to have the call on the attention of the crowds of shoppers who now throng the streets.

He sells tin mice. They are not a new toy, but their popularity seems to have increased. Through the mouse's back runs a string, five or six feet long. This is attached to a spool, which gets its motive power from a rubber band. The mouse is dropped to the ground and the string attached to the spool causes the rubber band to twist. Then the string is released and "Mr. Mouse" skips along over the street or floor with enough lifelike effect to cause "Miss Shopper" to lift her skirts, scream and hunt for a high place. Then when she sees it is only a tin mouse she buys one from the salesman and takes it home for Brother Willie's edification.

Children stand on the sidewalk and watch the antics of the mice with delight, and often spend the ten cents they have brought along for candy for one of the active little toys.

TWO CITY OFFICIALS MAKE GIFTS TO POOR.

Alderman Sweeney and Prosecuting Attorney Clover Replenish
Coal Supply of Needy.

Much of the suffering in the Fourth District among the poor, whose numbers are many in that section of the city, has been alleviated by two men prominent in the municipal government of St. Louis—Alderman Sweeney and Prosecuting Attorney Clover.

JOHN P. SWEENEY.
Member of the House of Delegates, who is furnishing fuel to the poor families in the Fourth Police District.

man John P. Sweeney of the Third Ward, and Henry A. Clover, Prosecuting Attorney of the Criminal Court of Correction—by their liberal donations of coal to the needy.

When the first of the wintry blasts struck the city last week they realized the suffering which it invariably brings to the poor and notified Captain Boyd of the district to furnish a list of those who were in need of help.

All day Monday and yesterday coal wagons, containing baskets filled with fuel, visited the district. Twenty-five bushels were left with each family on the list furnished. The donors in a number of cases accompanied the big wagons on the errands of charity, seeing that each family was fully supplied, and the sight of so many kindly made cheerful was recompense for the money expended, they say.

At many of the houses visited the occupants were unaware of the object of their callers until the teamsters appeared with heaping baskets of coal.

LECTURE ON PARIS. A. L. Berry delivered an illustrated lecture on Paris before the pupils of the Jewish Educational Alliance at the school of the association, corner Ninth and Carr streets, last night. Nearly 200 views of the French capital, collected by Mr. Berry in his recent tour of Europe, were shown. Rabbi Leon Harrison introduced the speaker.

DAN CORCORAN AND ANDY BLONG FIGHT.

Police Commissioner Is Worsted
in a "Mix-Up" in Whalen's Saloon.

Andrew P. Blong, Police Commissioner, and Dan Corcoran, clerk in the Assessor's office, "mixed it up" in a political argument in John Whalen's saloon, No. 5700 Easton avenue, Saturday night. Mr. Blong did not attend the tenuous inquiry at the city hall Monday, but Corcoran was at work as usual. The gossip had it that Blong's countenance was unfit for presentation. Corcoran's smiling features were unmarked.

According to the statements of eyewitnesses, Blong began the hostilities by punching Corcoran for an alleged offensive remark.

Corcoran is a big, brawny athlete of surprising strength and agility, and when the fight broke out he showed the interior of the saloon was unrecognizable.

The fight grew out of Corcoran's attempt to heal the old political feud between Blong and Phil Dwyer, engageder nearly two years ago. Corcoran and Blong were on friendly terms Saturday night when they met in the saloon with a dozen mutual friends. After several rounds and a friendly chat, Corcoran asked Blong why he did not make up with Dwyer. Blong resented Corcoran's interference with his personal affairs, and it is said, told him to mind his own business. He followed this up with other cutting remarks and wound up with some abusive personal remarks. Corcoran attempted to pacify him, but finally resorted to blows. Blong, who is a former prizefighter, returned the blows, and the fight continued for some time.

Corcoran instantly returned the blow, and Whalen's floor, the battered and other mutual friends endeavored to prevent further hostilities. They might as well have tried to hold a wild elephant as Corcoran. In his rage he swung every head in sight in his efforts to get at Blong. Whalen was the first victim. He was put to sleep with a blow that split his lip and knocked two teeth down his throat. The bartender, Flood, went down and out with a blow that opened his cheek. Another peace-maker was knocked against the stove and his face was badly burned. A fourth was laid low with a smash that closed one of his eyes. Blong, who was a former prizefighter, returned the blows, and the fight continued for some time.

Blong, who is a former prizefighter, returned the blows, and the fight continued for some time. Corcoran, who is a former prizefighter, returned the blows, and the fight continued for some time.

DRAMATIC PUPILS PRESENT A COMEDY.

Fashionable Audience Grooms Professor Guy Lindsay and His Class at Germania Theater.

Professor Guy Lindsay and his pupils at the Germania Theater last night presented Arthur W. Pinero's comedy, "Trelawney of the Wells," and a large and fashionable audience witnessed it. Incidentally this marks the first production of Pinero's play by an amateur organization. Once before the play has been seen here, when it was presented at the Olympia by the Frohman company two seasons ago.

"Trelawney of the Wells" is rather an ambitious play for any but a professional company to attempt, yet Mr. Lindsay's pupils handled their roles cleverly and the character parts were especially well presented.

The play tells the story of Rose Trelawney, leading woman of the Baines-Wells Theater, and the principal characters are those associated with it. Miss Trelawney in her progress from the stage to a position as the promised wife of one high in London society. The players of the theater are brought into contact with characters of social life. The period, 1860, gives opportunity for quaint and pleasing costumes.

Miss Evelyn Fricke, as Rose, possesses a pleasing voice. Miss Manning played the part in the original production, and Miss Fricke has chosen to model her conception of the part very much after Miss Manning's style. Her friends found her interesting and gave her much encouragement. Joseph Solari essayed Arthur Trelawney and played his part well, while Mr. Lindsay made Tom Wrench a thoroughly effective part.

In the character roles Mr. Lindsay's pupils were at their best. Joseph J. Halley handled two of the minor roles with ability, and won commendation for effective work and good make-up. As James Telfer of the "Wells," he did some of the best work of the evening, while as a spectator he was an amusing cockney and found much favor. Israel Friedkin also handled two character parts well. Quite a pleasant concert was his Mr. Abbot, and his Vice Chancellor in the second act pleased those in the audience immensely. James H. Shortell as the "Wells" comedian and Miss Helen Fisher as the impressionable Ingenua received numerous marks of their friends' favor.

Those in the cast showed the results of careful rehearsal, and the play was presented with very little to do. Preceding "Trelawney," Beulah Marie Dick's comedy, in one act, "A Cavalier's Courtship," was presented.

PRIMA DONNA IS IN DISTRESS.

Miss Freda Ricci Expects to Raise Money by Giving a Benefit Concert.

Miss Freda Ricci, prima donna soprano of the Southwest Opera company, unwilling to ask assistance of strangers, and being without funds because of her generosity to those in the East who compose her family, has arranged a novel method of providing herself with means for finding another engagement and leaving St. Louis without depending upon her friends for aid. She is preparing to give a concert in which she will appear in other singers and musicians, and from the proceeds of this she expects to make enough to return to New York without leaving obligations behind her.

Miss Ricci was one of the singers brought to St. Louis for the opera engagement, and although she admits that there is still salary due her, she does not expect to receive it, and, bravely says that such things are to be expected in the career of a professional singer and must be taken with equanimity.

Behind the temporary financial embarrassment that has kept Miss Ricci here after the other principals of the company have succeeded in getting on, the prima donna is a pleasant story of devotion and sacrifice. The major part of her salary is said to have been given to her family in the expectation that a long season would result in a plentifully filled purse. When the Southwest company closed prematurely she admits that she found herself without funds. Dismissing the matter as a slight on her agents, she said: "I do not blame the management of the company as some of them do, and as a professional woman I know that such things as these occur sometimes in the career of a singer."

She said she was not going to ask for help, but she was going to try to help herself. She was going to give a concert, and she was going to ask for help. She was going to give a concert, and she was going to ask for help.

ADDRESSED SYNODS ON EDUCATION.

President McCracken on the Aim of Westminster College—Board of Trustees Elected.

At the joint meeting of the Missouri Presbyterian Synods, held at the Grand Avenue Church, President McCracken of Westminster College made an address on the aim and objects of the institution. He said, in part:

"This day will, I feel sure, be memorable in the history of Missouri Presbyterianism. In the action of to-day Westminster is born again. The two synods of Missouri after a separation of twenty-seven years have met face to face and putting aside past differences and prejudices have taken hold of a common work in a most liberal and open-hearted manner. God grant that the work thus solemnly begun be not hastily forsaken, but that the church may be forward in this great work to which they have set their hands."

"The small college reaches deep down into American life, and from vigorous, unselfish, and self-reliant, resourceful, doubles their natural endowment by the addition of learning and sends them out to lead and to rule in business, in society, in Government. Westminster is a college of the future, and it is our duty to lead and to rule in business, in society, in Government. Westminster is a college of the future, and it is our duty to lead and to rule in business, in society, in Government."

A Board of Trustees for Westminster College was elected, and the following were chosen: From the synod of Missouri, U. S. A., 1902, the Reverend Doctor J. B. Ferguson, the Reverend Doctor J. H. Hendry of Jefferson City, the Reverend Doctor W. H. Pollock, D. D., the Reverend Doctor F. W. Need, the Reverend Doctor W. J. McKelrick, J. S. Fisher, the Reverend Doctor F. L. Ferguson, C. G.
